A schoolboy will tell you that Japan is not exactly our antipodes, but to our notions everything is almost the opposite of what we are accustomed to Flowers are geontless; fruit trees are cultivated not for the fruit they yield, but for the bioscoms they bear; what little native fault there is is tasteless. Stately forest trees are dwarfed, so that the garden of a few square yards may have its road, bridge and full grown mak. Nature is stanted and oppressed, yet at the same time aided and assisted so that the result may be pleasing to the eye, and therein lies the secret of

In the early day, say 20 of 25 years ago—that is, the time when W. E. Griffis wrote "The Mikado's Empire"
—we foreigners were treated in the same manner, and we have only our CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. selves to blame for the dislike with which we are regarded at present. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Those of us who tried to learn the language, being necesterned to the terse and more or less abrupt Anglo Saxon, had very little patience with this continuous flow of ceremonial. Many is the time that a hearty "baka da ne," the very worst expression a Japanese can utter and which can only be translated by our emphatic "the d-d foel," was Is purty much like other folks-we're apt to hurled at the back of the unconscious foreigner. He had offended against the The spring's too back'ard fer us er too for'ard supreme law, the code of ethics, by dissupreme law, the code of ethics, by d Lumber and Coal and the cooly, bareheaded, with a profound salaam, says, "That is honorably so, but may it please your honor to be stow," etc. A foreigner bargains with the same cooly a few hours later. He is asked twice or three times the fare which a Japanese would pay, and if he offers that the cooly says simply, "No" (this is the extent of his knowledge of our tongue), and with a "baka da ne" returns to his stand. Go into a native store accompanied by a Japanese gentleman. The storekeeper, squatted behind his hibachi (charcoal brazier), bows profoundly to your friend and favors you with a stare. Would his politeness not be thrown away upon such a boor as you heins. such a boor as you, being a foreigner, are supposed to be? You are welcome to buy, and he will squeeze you all he can, but as to wasting his civility upon you-bah! There is no use in mincing matters. Japan has been described time and again by ephemeral visitors who saw every-thing as through rose colored glasses. The consequence is that Japan and the Japanese have been misrepresented, both in the United States and elsewhere, and they have not been slow to take ad-vantage of the high regard in which they are held. But this is neither a race nor a nation that requires petting, nor is it necessary to go into ecstasie over them. On the contrary, this people of over 40,000,000 has a wonderful vitality and a national vigor that will make themselves felt in the world's history. But in describing conditions as they actually are there is no intention to cast OUR EXPRESS WAGONS will call for all the odium upon the Japanese. It has been stated before that we foreigners been stated before that we foreigners

BAGGAGE CHECKED direct to destina more fully it is only necessary to look into the matter of business intercourse as between foreigner and native. Having made connections with custom still prevails. the superior of us, but is decidedly ar-rogant toward a Japanese, who in his turn regards his Mongolian neighbor with the contempt of a Californian.
Under these circumstances a Japa nese gentleman on business intent would come to Yokohama. Instead of meeting with the courtesy to which, in his own country at least, he certainly is entitled, he would be detained by the Chinaman or perhaps meet some supercilious junior clerk fresh from the mother country and consequently not a little imprewith his own superiority over any na-tive, asking him, "What do you want?" and then refer him to the Chinaman. Is it not natural that this Japanese should shake the dust of this house and make a solemn vow not to cross the threshold again?

To be sure, most firms have supersed To be sure, most firms have superseded the Chinese compradore by native salesmen or interpreters, but these belong to the lower class of Japanese, with whom a gentleman will not associate. Hence misunderstanding and ill feeling Japanese of the better class give Yokoama a wide berth. To them this city is an anomaly, a fungus upon the sacred soil of Dai Nippon, and some foreigners, thoughtlessly perhaps, do much to strengthen this feeling. — Yokohama Cor. New York World.

An Electrical Retoucher.

Photographers have lately introduced a pencil for use in retouching negatives which is rapidly revolved by a small electro motor, so that the point of the pencil spins and is rubbed on to any spot by simply moving the point gently over in any desired direction, thus doing away with the necessity of the tiresome, confined motion of the operator's hand. A German idea in this line which possesses merit consists in fixing the negative of the photograph in a frame, which is vibrated rapidly by an electro-magnetic apparatus. Mention is made also of a still later device of this kind of English origin, in which the pencil made also of a still later device of this kind of English origite, in which the pencil point is very rapidly vibrated through an exceedingly small stroke by a simple else tro-magnetic contact breaker, so that the pencil has only to be guided by the opera-tor, while the electro-magnet performs the necessary rubbing at an exceeding rapid rate—about 2,000 strokes per minute.—New York Sun.

Waukegan Barbed Wire is as strong as the strongest, contains just as many barbs to the rod, and yet weighs less per rod than any other style of barbei wire.

This result is accomplished by using a half round wire in the barb, instead of a full round wire as in all other tarbed wires; then it is twisted out once around one of the main wires, thus saving the weight of additional twists. This wire is thoroughly galvanized, something much needed in this climate.

We also sell a special wire stretcher and galvanized steel staples for Waukegan Wire.
